ANN ARBOR, MICH .:

THE COURIER PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT.

1892.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1892, by GLEN V. MILLS, in the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

INTRODUCTION.

With the delivery of this volume, the Directory of 1892, is issued the eighth edition of Ann Arbor City and the fifth of Ypsilanti City and Washtenaw County. A close examination of each succeeding publication shows, with perhaps a few exceptions, a marked improvement in the make up and style of the directories and in the volume, arrangement and reliability of their contents. In considering these changes and additions which are so beneficial to patrons it will be found that a large portion above the average appear in the present edition which heretofore have been inserted only in the larger cities of the state.

The complete maps of the cities of Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti giving the recent additions of territory, ward-bounderies, streets, avenues and railroads; the street and avenue guide of the cities, with the names arranged alphabetically and each followed by its location and direction and numbers of same appearing upon corners, intersections and junctions of cross streets; the insertion of telephone numbers; the cross references of names pronounced the same or nearly so, but spelled differently, which the alphabetical arrangement causes to be separated by many pages; the union of the village alphabetically and complete classified directory of their business portion; are the most notable additions.

In bringing this volume before the public, the publisher wishes to thank the business men for their liberal patronage, considering which, every effort has been made to make the work correct and complete, and the best material used in its construction. As a result of the publication of this Directory in Ann Arbor, there will be a library of the principal directories of the United States available for the use of the patrons for reference.

Respectfully Yours,

GLEN V. MILLS, Publisher.

DESCRIPTION.

Extending over the rolling, gravel hills, on either bank of the swift flowing Huron, are situated the two beautiful towns of Michigan, the residence cities of Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, "The Twin Cities of the Huron."

Ann Arbor was settled in the year 1824. Its location and its progress was such that 13 years later it was chosen as the location for that institution which has become the great University of Michigan, with the largest attendance of any school in the Western Hemisphere. In the year 1851 it was incorporated as a city, from which time the growth has been steady and sure. One great source of pride to Ann Arbor citizens and tax payers is that the city is entirely free from debt.

There are in the Ann Arbor alphabetical portion of the Directory 4,862 names exclusive of students. The usual multiple used by directory publishers to ascertain their estimates of population is $3\frac{1}{2}$, which would make the population of Ann Arbor 17,017. By using the multiple of $2\frac{1}{2}$ which is far more conservative, but lower than ever taken in marks of this kind gives the city 12,155.

taken in works of this kind, gives the city 12,155.

During the year of 1891 there were 250 private residences constructed, together with other buildings, at a cost of over one half million dollars, yet there is not a vacant business place in the city, and very few dwellings.

vacant business place in the city, and very few dwellings.

Ann Arbor has a good supply of water. The works are owned and operated by the Ann Arbor Water Company. A regular fire department, with eight full-paid men in the service and with all the necessary machinery for the protection of the city. The streets are lighted by the Thompson-Houson electric system, which is also used in the business places, together with the Edison system, and artificial gas. The two last extensive improvements are the two street railway systems: The first the Ann Arbor Street Railway, consisting of two electric lines running from the Michigan Central Railroad Depot to the junction of Hill Street and Washtenaw Avenue and the junction of Packard Street and the city limits respectively. The second the Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti Street Railway, running from the junction of Packard Street and Ann Arbor City Limits to corner of Congress and Washington Streets in Ypsilanti, a distance of nearly nine miles. When Ann Arbor has a complete sewer system, which will no doubt be approved by the people at the polls this coming election, it will have all the improvements of any city of its size and far in advance of many.

Ann Arbor has excellent railroad facilities; the Michigan Central and the Toledo Ann Arbor & North Michigan railroads cross the State in such a manner as to make connection with nearly every railroad in Michigan and gives Ann Arbor as good shipping advantages as any city in the country, which has made the city an excellent location for manufacturing plants as has been proven by the share it has received for a city of its size. Ann Arbor has a favorable location and would have been one of the great manufacturing cities of Michigan had not the people chosen (and the great University has forced them into this choice) to make a quiet and beautiful residence city rather than a manufacturing center with the objections which always surround them. They have used the money which others have given as bonuses to beautify their streets, residences and public buildings; considering these together with its walks, its drives and its groves of maple shade, an equal cannot be found in this broad union.

The University of Michigan, the prime mover in this digression from the general method of cities, is the pride, not only of the city of Ann Arbor, but of the State and Nation. The 2,800 students now enrolled in the University come from nearly every state of the United States and has representatives from many foreign countries. The University has five distinct departments, that of Literature, Science and The Arts, of Law, of Medicine, of Pharmacy and of Dentistry. The Department of Medicine is subdivided into the Allopathic and Homocopathic Schools. The subdivision of the Department of Literature Science and the Arts gives for students ample choice for degrees which lead to different branches of professonal life. The Library of the University contains upwards of 15,000 volumes, a considerable portion of which, consisting of manuscripts, rare works and great libraries, has been bequeathed to the University by literary and educational men of the passing generation. The Art Rooms and the Museum contain large collections of the highest order. The large Hospitals erected during the past summer have made it possible to accommodate the patients who heretofore could not be received.

The public school system of Ann Arbor is second to none in the country. The High School by its excellent management has become the preparatory school to the University.

Ypsilanti, the second subject of this description, was permanently settled in 1823, there having been a French trading post situated near the city during early colonial times. The city has a steady growth, similar to that of Ann Arbor; its location is without a parallel, and although Ypsilanti has made more efforts to secure manufacturing industries than her sister city west of her, yet she has not forgotten that the improvement of the streets and buildings is necessary.

Among the manufacturing establishments of the city may be mentioned, a knitting mill, dress stay and box factory, two foundries and machine shops, two planing mills, two carriage works, two flour mills, a brewery, two large paper mills near the city, the working men of which all reside within its limits, besides cooper and pattern shops, smaller concerns for the manufacture of coffee roasters, grass seed sowers, washing machines, etc.

The main line of the Michigan Central Railroad, to-gether with the Hillsdale Branch of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, which terminates in the city, constitutes its shipping facilities.

One of the advantages Ypsilanti possesses over most Michigan cities, is that it ownes its water works and electric light plant; as a result excellent service is obtained at the lowest possible cost. The water, which is of the very best quality, is taken from a deep well and pumped into a tower situated at the highest point of the city. The electric plant is used only for street lighting purposes. An incandescent system has recently been put in by a private company, which, with gas, is used for lighting business places.

Extensive sewer mains are being laid and other improvements made, which proves Ypsilanti to be one of the live, energetic cities.

By multiplying the number of names appearing in the Ypsilanti portion of this Directory by two and one half, it places the population above 7,500.

Ypsilanti has for years been known as an educational town, being the location of the Michigan State Normal The work of this institution is principally the education of teachers, to whom it grants life certificates of the highest grade, and is doing noble work in the elevation of that profession. The Cleary Business College, located in a beautiful building of its own and employing eight teachers, has a large attendance.
